

Free Archaeology training with Revealing Oldknow's Legacy & Salford University

We are offering the following sessions:

8 February 2017 Industrial Archaeology of Stockport and Greater Manchester

The first of two talks by Mike Nevell, Head of Archaeology at the Centre for Applied Archaeology at the University of Salford, on the industrial heritage of Stockport and Manchester.

7pm, The Navigation at Lock 13, Stockport Road, Marple

15 February 2017 Archaeology of Textile Mills in Stockport and Greater Manchester

The second of Mike Nevell's talks looks specifically at what archaeology can tell us about textile mills in our region.

7pm, The Navigation at Lock 13, Stockport Road, Marple

23 February 2017 & 2 March 2016 Historical Research and Report Writing Skills

In these two sessions, Rachael Reader will talk you through the process of gathering information on local sites and putting it together into a historical report. Where should you begin? What sources can you use? How do you tie together all your evidence into one document?

7pm, The Navigation at Lock 13, Stockport Road, Marple

9 March 2017 Archaeological Site Skills

Sarah Cattell will talk you through what you can expect at an archaeological dig and teach you all the associated recording skills you will need.

7pm, The Navigation at Lock 13, Stockport Road, Marple

16 March 2017 Finds Processing and Cataloguing

Kirsty Whittall will show you how to clean, assess, and record your finds to get the most information out of them.

10am – 4pm, SPARC Lab, Centre for Applied Archaeology, University of Salford

23 March 2017 Finds Conservation

Kirsty will show you how to conserve and protect your finds once they have been excavated. 10am – 4pm, SPARC Lab, Centre for Applied Archaeology, University of Salford

27 March 2017 Community Dig at Marple Lime Kilns

Come join us to put all of your skills into practice at a week long dig at Marple Lime Kilns – see what you can uncover about Marple's history!
